

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1745.

of a private Letter, Limbourg, February 18.

THE French Troops under the Command of the Marquis de Refuge, who have been in our Neighbourhood ever since the 9th of December, have, at last, quitted their Quarters, when we least expected it, and that too a little in a Hurry; which, however, does not give us much Satisfaction, since they did not go an Hour sooner than they were gone. They are withdrawing from their several Posts upon the Lahnne River; notwithstanding they gave out, that they were in Motion to sustain and defend them. It is certain, that if the Marquis de Refuge had all these Troops together, he would have been able to have secured the Country he possess'd the Lahnne, against an Army divided into three Corps; which, by reason of the advanced Season of the Year, and their Want of proper Magazines, is in no Condition of uniting.

We made no doubt that this was his Design, when, on Sunday last, he sent for a great Number of Peasants to fortify this Town; they arrived the next Morning, which was the 14th, and began immediately to barricade our three Gates, and the Streets of the suburbs which lead to the Lower Rhine; they were to work hard the two next Days; till on the 16th about Three in the Morning, the Troops from the Lahnne abandon'd that Post, and retired hither. Those that were posted at Nassau and at Dietz, did not leave, after they had ruined all the Breaches. The Marquis de Refuge, in order to prevent our guessing at his true Design, gave out, that he had Orders to extend his Forces as far as Wetzlar, in order to prevent the Hapoversians from joining the Allies; and that the Posts he had abandon'd were to be occupied by fresh Troops.

But this could not amuse us long; for by Ten o'clock that Morning, we began to perceive they were moving all Things for their Retreat; and about eleven o'clock, the Officers sent away their Baggage. By Three o'clock our Gates being in a Manner wall'd up, and the Streets next the River so barricaded, that there was no passing, they very fairly threw the Keys of the Town into the River, and founded a Retreat. By four o'clock the Troops began to march towards Rhingau, in order to pass the Rhine at Bingen. They intended to have marched 10 Leagues that Night, so as to have reach'd the Bridge the next Morning. But their Hopes, as seems, outran their Heels, tho' they mov'd with the Wind in the World; for when they had marched 10 Leagues, they were obliged to encamp; that is to say, to take Heaven for their Canopy, and their Cloaks for their Pillows.

A few Hours before they left us, the Marquis de Refuge demanded 12,000 Florins, in Return for the Quarters he had shown us. We must'r'd up the Third Part of that Sum, and paid him the rest in very fair Promises, besides a Purse of Gold for himself and his Officers. The Towns of Nassau, Landstein, Dietz, &c. had the same Fate; but, on the other Hand, the French have left behind them a large Quantity of Forage and Provisions, together with Baggage to a considerable Value, which they were in too great a Hurry to take with them.

Thus, in 24 Hours Time, these Heroes have abandon'd all the Wetteraw, of which they took Possession with such an Air of Conquest, and in which they might have maintain'd themselves so easily, if they would have run any Risque of fighting. All the Countries now on the Rhine and Main, to the very Gates of Mainz and Frankfort, lie quite open to the Allies, where they may meet with plentiful Subsistence; since what a Body of 4500 French could destroy in the Space of 10 or 11 Weeks, is not a Matter of any great Consequence. Add to all this, that the Lower Rhine, and Westphalia, are now entirely delivered from all those apprehensions of an Invasion, with which they have been so long terrified. This is a fair and true Account of the Matter, and of the Triumphs of the French in Germany.

Dublin, February 9. Yesterday Morning, at Eight o'clock, came on in his Majesty's Court of King's Bench, the Trial of Mrs. Heath, upon an Indictment for Perjury, said to her Charge, in the Cause between Mr. Ansell and the Earl of Anglesea, which lasted till Five this Morning; when the Jury, after a short Stay, brought her in Not Guilty.

Last Tuesday died at Silver Spring, in the County of Wexford, Mr. George Leckey, an eminent Merchant of this City.

Extract of a Letter from Kinfa, dated February the 21st, 1744.

'We have now in the Harbour the Loustoff Privateer of 20 Guns, Charles Fielding, Commander, and his Prize, a French Privateer of 11 Guns, called the Le St. Esperita; the Boyne of Dublin, 16 Guns, John Hughes, Commander, and his Prize the City of Bourdeaux, from Martinico. The Trial, 18 Guns, William Woods, and his Prize the Junon of Nantes, from Martinico. The Biscayne Privateer, 20 Guns, Campbell, Commander, came in to be rock'd. The De Virside, of Bourdeaux, Prize to the Shoreham, Trial and Tulse, from Martinico, 300 Tons, and 10 Guns, laden with Sugar, Cotton, and Coffee; and a French Banker from Newfoundland, laden with Fish, sent in by the Shoreham, tho' ransom'd by the Biscayne.'

Yesterday the Shoreham Privateer arrived here with a Prize, being a small Spanish Advice Boat, sent out to Admiral de Torres, as it is reported; she wears the King of Spain's Colours the same as his Men of War; they report there were Three more on the same Account. They threw over Part of their Papers, which have since been found, by which it is hoped to get Intelligence of their Fleet, that our Privateers may do the Duty of Men of War. Capt. Woods, in the Trial, filed this Morning, with his Prize, for Bristol.

Last Tuesday a remarkable Cause, which had been depending Four Years, concerning St. Luke's Church, supposed to be vacant by the Promotion of Bishop Dopping to the See of Ossory, was determin'd in the Court of Common Pleas, and Sentence given for the Dean and Chapter of St. Patrick's against the Crown. This Cause had been maturely considered, and very well argued; but as this Parish appeared to be a mere Cure, of which the Dean and Chapter are the real Incumbents, it was concluded, that nothing but the Death of the Minister can make a Vacancy in a Parish so appropriated, and so circumstanced; and that the Prerogative of the Crown cannot extend to vicare the Cure upon the Promotion of the Curate to a Bishoprick, unless it be the Bishoprick of the same Diocese in which the appropriate Cure happens to be.
